

Sacramento Zoo Honors Longtime Donor U.S. Bank

The nonprofit Zoo relies on the support of Sacramento community members like U.S. Bank-

U.S. Bank has once again donated $25,000 to the Sacramento Zoo through its foundation. The Sacramento Zoo relies on the support of community members like U.S. Bank to continuously improve the 90-year-old gem in Land Park and to serve the Zoo's mission. U.S. Bank's dedicated support of the Zoo dates back to the early 90's and can be seen throughout the Zoo at the Tall Wonders Giraffe exhibit, Conservation Carousel, educational programs, Zoo fundraisers, and other special projects. Members of U.S. Bank have also served on the Sacramento Zoo's Board of Trustees. One of the Zoo's newest Board of Trustee members is Jennifer Neal, Relationship Manager at U.S. Bank.

"I can't thank U.S. Bank enough for once again providing the Sacramento Zoo with support vital for our continued success in serving our community," said Dr. Kyle Burks, Director/CEO of the Sacramento Zoo. "As a non-profit organization, having backing of U.S. Bank, and all of our supporters, is essential to us each and every day."

"Our corporate giving and volunteer program is called Community Possible it focuses on the areas of work, home and play. Supporting the Sacramento Zoo is part of our play pillar and we are proud to be part of what makes this community connected through culture, recreation and play."

The Sacramento Zoo is also excited to announce that it will be honoring U.S. Bank for its continuous support at the annual Wild Affair gala on Saturday, October 1.

As a non-profit the Sacramento Zoo relies on the community. This support comes in a variety of ways and includes attendance, individual donors, corporate donors, volunteers and more. All of this allows the Zoo to make capital improvements, give the animals the best care possible, offer a wide variety of education programs and inspire the more than 500,000 guests that visit the Zoo every year.
